Words and Music by Andraé Crouch. Arranged by Rollo A. Dilworth. In the early 1970's, the sacred music of Andraé Crouch, along with the music of the Hawkins family, marked the beginning of what is known as the modern or contemporary gospel era. It was in this period that Crouch's unique approach of combining sacred lyrics with the secular influenced sounds of soul, folk and rock that the new genre began to take form. Many contemporary gospel artists of today have been influenced by the compositions of Andraé Crouch.

Please join us in singing Verse 5 – we'll need lots of volume from you as the choir will be pitted against you!

I'm goin' to put on my starry crown –
Down by the riverside, down by the riverside, down by the riverside.

Down by the riverside, and I ain't gonna study war no more.

I ain't gonna study war no more, I ain't gonna study war no more,
